7. Senior Executive Course, DODCI

[REDACTED] OF, who attended the 10 April Senior Executive Course, Department of Defense Computer Institute, has made the following comments regarding the course:

"The program is excellent in both concept and execution. DOD is probably better versed in the dynamic computer field than any other department or agency since they have over three fourths of the computers in Government....

The progress in the computer industry in the past 15 years is almost unbelievable. The outlook for the next few years, according to most of the speakers, will be even more remarkable and will require considerable effort on the part of management to keep abreast of the field and to come up with ideas for optimum utilization of the computer industry's hardware. For these reasons, I believe the course is well worth the time of all senior management officials."
